PURPOSE

To support individuals and groups to fulfill their potential by helping them unleash their talent and skills as leaders and managers, as workers and entrepreneurs, from small organizations to major corporations, in classrooms, scientific endeavors, the arts, government or wherever people can make a difference.

PROFILE

I began my consulting career in the early 1980s at the request of a senior HR executive at NBC, who saw the value of consulting far before the field became popular. Since then, I have helped many mid- to senior-level executives contribute a greater share of their talent and potential as leaders and managers in enterprises, from small organizations to major corporations. In addition, I have supported individual professionals and entrepreneurs to build small businesses and offer products and services that provide real value to the public.

To accomplish their goals, I have helped clients develop a range of skills. Starting with their own self-awareness, clients learn to observe their organization and its objectives from a broader perspective, resolve interpersonal issues within a team, and overcome the blocks to their own creativity so that they can identify new pathways to achieve objectives and design new programs and products. The core strength of my work is drawn from my intuitive capability and perceptiveness, my rigorous honesty and insistence on high integrity and accountability from me and my clients, and my keen practicality, all of which have helped my clients overcome some of their toughest challenges. My clients and I are partners dedicated to achieving the highest good.

SKILLS BASE

- Capacity to quickly grasp the big picture of clients' enterprises and challenges
 - Intuitive ability to see what eludes others, particularly in the realm of human dynamics
 - Creativity in developing unique tools and techniques to help deconstruct client paradigms that are obstacles to their innovation and achievement
 - Ability to help clients recognize their highest achievable goals and objectives, so that all energies and efforts are focused and productive
 - Capability to focus on the clients' process, so that they overcome their self-defeating limitations and develop their own problem-solving and creative capacities
 - Excellent communication skills. Have published books, articles and videos and have been interviewed on more than 65 radio stations, mostly in metropolitan areas or in syndication

- Proven long-term leadership and organizational abilities, demonstrated through the inception and management of several volunteer-based organizations, including a non-profit that has been evolving for over 25 years

PROFESSIONAL CAREER

Counselor & Consultant, 1980 – present

Current consulting work includes:

- Helping a business consultant refocus and design new and vital programs to help companies increase their productivity and improve their employee relations
- Supporting a global communications executive with significant public relations responsibilities and also helping her develop her own ghostwriting business, both in terms of gaining new clients and producing excellent products
- Helping a internationally-based green technology manufacturer restructure and recapitalize to take advantage of the 21st century economy
- Supporting an insurance industry executive, with past results including becoming a more effective expert witness, risk management consultant and member of senior management
- Consulting with a teacher who is developing educational programs in the public school system that teach good values and support underprivileged children to reach their potential
- Helping psychotherapists utilize my innovative ideas and techniques with their clients and co-creating teaching programs that improve the capacities and skills of others

Past consulting achievements include:

- Supported a software developer to start a new company that ultimately created groundbreaking software in the field of mortgages and escrows; our work touched staffing, technical decisions, and organizational development
 - Helped a health care industry consultant lead a large addiction facility to obtain vital accreditation
 - Supported a state-wide religious community to overcome long-standing interpersonal problems and create supportive structures
 - Helped turn around a financially troubled surgery practice by revamping its internal policies and personnel
 - Supported the Clinical Director of a nonprofit mental health agency to deliver client services and train interns

Founder, The Stream, 1983 – present

Founded and organized a non-profit spiritual and educational organization that is dedicated to re-defining what it means to be human. Have overseen and actively engaged in all aspects of the organization, starting with the creation of innovative approaches to age-old human problems, and including management and training, operations, finance, public outreach and information, and program delivery. The Stream, which is supported by a staff of 10 volunteers, has hosted dozens of workshops and educational programs to help people fulfill their potential in all areas of life, including career, relationships, family and community. Specific achievements include:

- Groundbreaking ideas, modalities, tools and techniques that help people reach their potential
- Development of a community based on high integrity and principles, resulting in long-term well being for all participants
- Providing many free and ongoing programs to help the community with emotional and spiritual challenges, such as parenting, sexuality, addiction recovery and emotional and mental health

CLIENT FOCUS

My skills and intuitive abilities can support anyone who is seeking real progress in his or her field, who is open to true self-examination and who is excited by the prospect of re-evaluating current patterns of thinking and behaving. My goal is to help clients release the obstacles to their native wisdom and creativity. We are collaborators in a co-creative process, bringing together the client's knowledge, wisdom and experience with my own.
